Sir * 's SPEECH,

Ec. Ec.

I'LL tell you a Story, how lately Sir Blue
Bespoke in great Glee all his 'Squires so true,
Here, brave Boys, is a Peace; so first give Approbation,
And take it anon into Consideration.

Derry down,

down, down, derry down.

II. Of

II.

Of all the fine Treaties that ever were made,
Of all I remember, and all I have read,
A Treaty so glorious there never was known,
For this (I declare it) is quite all my own.

Derry down, &c.

III.

You shall find nothing here of a musty old Right,
Of a free Navigation, and Shiddle come Shite ;
As well might a School-Boy, cry, Doctor, no Birch,
As England but Name to proud Spaniards No Search.

IV. The

IV.

The Cits they may rave about Slaves at Caracca,
As if 'twas th' Excise upon Wine and Tobacco ;
But here for your Honour, your Ears, and your Wounds,
Here's my famous old Plaister, some Thousand good [Pounds.

V.

In such Reparation there's solid good Sense :
Who wou'd stand on Punctilio's, and let go the Pence ?
It's true, they have ventured to piss on our Flag,
But why shou'd Friends quarrel about an old Rag.
Derry down, &c.

VI. You

VI.

You may talk of your Burleigh, your Raleigh, and Drake,

And all those mad Fellows that made Spain to quake ;
 But forgive me to say, while I do myself Right,
 That I am the first have the Heart, Not to Fight.

Derry down, &c.

VII.

I have stood Kicks and Cuffs with a brave Moderation,
 By which I have saved a great Sum to the Nation ;
 For had Haddock beat 'em as Bing did before,
 'Twou'd have cost us the Price of their Navy once more.

Derry down, &c.

VIII. What

VIII.

What tho' for some time we have lost all our Trade,
 While Treaties were making, which never were made;
 Yet here, my brave Boys, is an End of your Woes,
 For now Commissaries are turn'd Plenipo's.

Derry down, &c.

IX.

And to prove that our Rights can't be question'd again,
 I have got, I can tell you, the Great Seal of Spain;
 It will make you amends for your Half Million Tax,
 When you see it so fair, and so fine upon Wax!

Derry down, &c.

X. So

XIV

So I'll tell you once more, that no Human Invention
 Cou'd ever have hit on so rare a Convention ;
 Tho' the Merchants complain, and the Patriots bawl,
 Believe, and stand by me, or G--- d--- you all.
